
Personalizing and customizing competency-based material to students has the promise of greatly improving student success. In this paper, we present some of the initial work we have done to creating a competency-based program in computing, and some of the issues we have identified in doing so, along with some proposed solutions.